Don't forget that you are these messages; imbued with their substance, they emanate from your vibration when it is elevated to a higher level, in these circumstances where your heart melts into ours. You immerse yourself in us, and in this act of love, you are more than a medium: a receiver vibrated by our energy and which tunes in to our thought. That osmosis results into a work, which we are expecting our brothers to be grateful for, in terms of the considerable capital it brings to our Mission.

"These writings will initially have a mixed reception, but as a whole, they will quickly become irreplaceable. They will touch hearts in an irreversible way. Being divinely inspired, they cannot miss their objective; this fact has to be borne in mind. Our faithful aspirants are making progress: their vibrations are becoming more refined, and they are becoming receptive to what is in the offing beyond appearances and theories developed in this world, many of which are unfounded with respect to universal realities.

"They must be wary of hasty judgments on all that emanates from the world of the Spirit. What is badly perceived here below, and which can surprise, is not consequently inconsistent: the truth does not reside in the boundaries of this illusory world.

"The man of tomorrow will have to adapt to a reality much more surprising for them than these messages coming from a high level of consciousness and given with a view of preparing them for a spectacular transition."
