

Friday, December 17, 2004 - 10:00 AM

Be more and more open to divine splendour. Widen your horizon up to the frontiers of the possible in this world with a heart open to grace. May these words open doors and be a secret ritual in the face of divinity. Your soul craves for these moments of communion, plunging a being into the area around the inexpressible peace. Life takes on a different meaning when it is built harmoniously in these spaces of higher spirituality. The purpose of all our speech is to bring this obvious fact to our brothers, their process operates in that direction; there lies what is at stake concerning their perseverance.

"To be united with the Divine results in a fusion of the various subtle bodies vibrating harmoniously and thus accelerating the process of evolution, hence the need for a continual repetition. We will never insist enough on this point: to be able to spare every day periods of time devoted to meditative practice is the best means of attaining that union. These rituals structure the entire spiritual life, and with time they can be carried out with greatest delight.

"There are no more thrilling moments in life than the moment when a soul opens out in all its splendour. These moments are unique, and they stand out in the entire quest. That quest towards the Absolute cannot be described, as it becomes so intense.

"May all our brothers experience a similar enthusiasm for surpassing themselves, going beyond useless aspects, towards the Immutable Splendour—sublime destination of any soul—which sooner or later, must inevitably be united to the Divine."

Babuji