Tuesday, December 21, 2004 - 10:00 AM

Keep alive that flame in you—that ardour in loving, serving us in spite of your difficulties.

"What would your life be without this long song of love punctuating your days? You offer your best to us; your human reactions do not last a long time in the face of the immutable beauty appearing in that open heart. It has gone through storms and so many ordeals of all kinds, leading it towards simplicity, and surrendering to the divine guide symbolizing our way.

"You were awaited, like all our brothers joining us in the desirable process for their evolution. Each one comes in with one's asset, one's way of seeing and feeling things; as humanity is characterized by its diversity, we cannot find uniformity among our aspirants. What brings them together is beyond the differences in opinion. Caught in the vibratory wave of a group meditation, differences fade away to let them be united with the Master in a moment of unique grace rejoicing the soul.

"If hatred could disappear and leave room for love, the face of the world would change and it would become liveable. Let us continue our action to that end. Nothing is impossible to God; we are His servants, prepared to work where and when He wants us to.

"May all our brothers keep positive thoughts about the future of humanity and apply themselves through a rigorous practice to changing themselves in the spirit we have just mentioned. All are supported and blessed."

Babuji