Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Wednesday, January 12, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

Certain areas of the globe conceal secrets which today's man cannot grasp. He would not make good use of them; his warlike and possessive instincts would lead him to exploiting what does not belong to him. Other habits will have to characterise the human race before the advent of the 'golden age' here below.

"What is essential resides in everyone here and now; only that treasure deserves a seeker's full attention. There is the starting point for the transformation of humanity. The seed of evil must be extirpated and leave room for a vibration characterising a level of consciousness in tune with future times. All is taking place slowly; that is how it is in this current cycle. The process must accelerate for a cosmic adjustment to occur.

"This world is entering a long period of change when all of the existing system will be renewed to conform to other interplanetary changes; all this escapes the specialists of those areas. What will happen is unforeseeable; no observatory, however powerful it may be, can detect it. The elements, driven by higher powers, keep their mysteries. What could man do in the face of something of such enormous scale, capable of generating upheavals that are currently hardly conceivable?

"The divine will, will be done as planned; and no human force will be able to counter it, not even weapons of 'dissuasion'. Let us continue on our road in the spirit that animates the Sahaj Marg Mission. For our aspirants, everything depends on their process and their unremitting efforts; grace will do the rest."
