Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Wednesday, January 19, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

The role of a scribe is not restful. Scribes are more committed than a reader can imagine. They are shaken by certain remarks. They must adapt to the vibratory frequency enabling them to tune in to the entity, and when they revert to their usual condition, they are often surprised by the contents of those writings whose accuracy they cannot verify. Only surrender, once again, is the essential condition for such a relationship.

"On no account can one remain indifferent. A highly spiritualised energy of love is the driving force in this matter; it is the only one capable of opening the most secret doors. The communication must be established with confidence, sweeping away inevitable and almost necessary doubts in a situation like this where humility is the mark of success.

"Is our scribe reassured? We all, in our respective activities, experienced doubt and fear of not being able to meet the expectations of our guides. That is simply normal: human nature is so fragile, entangled in contradictory feelings, which are not always easy to overcome.

"Too much self-assurance would be worrying. So isn't the best means to rely on him who has influence over the heart of his disciple, in a burst of surrender to his sagacity? Doesn't his great competence provide him, being a spiritual Master, with the means of assessing what is appropriate or not for the Mission and for who serves it?

"May the divine will be established in everything, particularly on the occasion that interests us here. Our blessings are bestowed on each and every one."

Babuji

