Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Friday, January 21, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

Little by little, thought must develop to the extent of fostering open-mindedness. Only time has the capacity of operating in that direction. Too much information at one time does not make the slightest difference. Pieces of information are gradually given herein, which, when assimilated, become certitudes – thus giving the reader the impression that he is not learning anything new.

"Thus is the goal reached; books containing too much esoteric information do not truly touch their target. Truths in that area must reach the seeker at a favourable moment, otherwise they may remain inaccessible to him. Spiritual work remains the most important aspect of our way; supplementing it with appropriate reading fosters that quest towards the Absolute.

"The new wave of energy favourable for human evolution can already be felt in hearts. The most receptive people can sense it, without being able to determine the cause of it. This world must change, and the conditions required for this will come mainly from outside, fostering the personal work of each one. Imperceptibly, the transformation will operate in the desired direction, most favourably for the tenacious seeker who is fully prepared in accordance with a more general movement.

"We repeat ourselves in our speech; it can't be any other way. Human beings are such that they cannot open out, both physically and spiritually, unless they are showered with ceaseless repetitions necessary for their development. The greatest Masters who influenced humanity did not operate differently, hence the power of their thought that was transmitted from one generation to the other."
