Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Wednesday, January 26, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

We are satisfied to see the spiritual development of this relationship between Master and disciple, which is dependent on a rather special approach that lies outside human patterns. Finding one's Master outside of conventional systems may be surprising; the communication by the Spirit takes place here with a specific purpose, which is not necessary to develop in this context.

"The higher will does not manifest itself without reason; time will give its full justification to writings that are still likely to surprise. They exist, that is all that counts. In due time they will shed a new light on the possible connection at this level between two hearts that are completely offered up to the divine will through their respective Master.

"In the field of the Spirit, the forces of good are sovereign; they act by shaking taboos, sometimes, to advance knowledge. Obscurantism still prevails on the Earth; humans find it difficult to consider what they do not experience themselves. Caught in this world of illusion and lies, they mistrust anything they cannot explain.

"How can one hold it against them? A long time will yet elapse on the Earth before everything becomes clear for humankind regarding its origin and the capabilities of each one of them, which have not developed because they didn't correspond to the spirit of time. That will not be always the case; the whole of these messages may one day be understood and accepted, whatever their source, without causing such astonishment.

"At all times, forerunners made things move forward by giving food for thought to the most receptive people, thus opening up new horizons to them."
