Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Sunday, February 6, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

In general, men act as if their life were eternal on Earth. Most of them neglect the fact that it will continue elsewhere, that they will have to take stock of it and draw necessary conclusions. If they follow a spiritual way, they try to adjust to values capable of helping them in their progress. Their principles are sometimes circumvented, but all in all, they act as well as possible, trying to avoid the many traps arising on their road.

"Where would be the challenge, if things were not like this? The way is long and all kinds of difficulties are necessary for the future initiate he is longing to become. Many are fighting courageously. In our way, there is no judgement; the aspirant is faced with himself and with his responsibilities concerning the rigour of his practice. We are doing nothing but helping him in that initiatory process that elevates him in the way. Difficulties cannot be avoided. Nothing is obtained easily, even more so in this area than elsewhere, since here only the divine laws apply with rigour and absolute equity.

"Our brothers are progressing at their respective paces, but all enjoy the same benefits of our system and also – which should be strongly emphasised – the benefits of the ceaseless work of their incarnate Master, the holder of powers that they cannot evaluate and that make them save a great deal of invaluable time. These truths, which have been put forth so many times, will one day manage to hit their target and bear fruit.

"After a hard-fought struggle, may humanity win, definitively, its liberation."
