Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Friday, February 18, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

Every day, the human being is given an opportunity to be fulfilled; he must be grateful for it and seize it. Life is like a movie that is taking place over time and whose images follow one another in a well-defined order, except that there is no possibility of reversing the facts.

"Everything develops around this succession of events of all kinds. The many facets of the human personality require this diversity. How could man find his bearings in an absolutely monotonous universe? He must go through all the stages of his development and be integrated into a way of life specific to his evolution.

"During his many incarnations, many experiences of very different kinds will be presented to him. This diversity shapes him, logically leading him towards wisdom, which is not always the case. Some ways are more tortuous than others; it takes time to bring a being to his point of blooming. He often stumbles and gets up again; such is the law in this world.

"When the need for change and progress is felt, man turns towards what, according to him, is essential for his evolution. He seeks and eventually finds what suits him. The direction of his life then becomes different as other priorities emerge and influence the course of his existence. The path is long and the achievement is sublime when it is eagerly sought.

"A soul opening up to the divine life is like a resplendent sun in the sky, taking along with it a multitude that is won over and determined."
