Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Sunday, February 26, 2006 – 10:00 a.m.

Find the way leading to this enclosed space where torments are abolished. There, peace and serenity are waiting for you. You enter another dimension where the grossness of the world has no influence. Senses have no bearing there; they are only human attributes, indelicate in this area where only subtle perception allows this contact.

"Man is actually quite fragile, in spite of his relative strength without which he could not cope with the hardness of the material world. This hardness applies in various ways, according to his karmic line; so many aspects are to be considered in this long search capable of freeing him from any obstacle. His learning about life on Earth goes through the most surprising phases, wisely placing him in situations where all aspects of his personality can be expressed.

"Long is the way, and often arid, but so very formative for the evolutionary process that interests us here. Man, on this Earth, is in search of happiness. His yearning, generally, lies there, without really even knowing what it is all about. Existing variously among beings, it nonetheless expresses the first steps of a spiritual call, a need of the soul to express itself in a form depending on the social context. Happy are those who follow this deeply felt call and find their own way. The most motivated ones keep on following it. Others go elsewhere; not being really ready, they carry on their experiences, which lead them at the proper time, without any doubt, towards the inexhaustible source. Our Mission plays its part in the world of men; it will be growing to answer a call, in accordance with the divine plans. That is how the destiny of humanity goes, heavily confronted with the rule of Maya."
