Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Sunday, February 27, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

Your heart knows where it can go when the thirst for the Divine carries it away. It does not resist, as this appeal is so strong. How could it not take advantage of these unique moments so intensely precious?

"What immutable and beautiful aspects remain of life, except what they represent in this journey aimed at conquering a perfection that brings a being to his achievement? A soul delights in the Divine – its mainstay, this sublime energy in its purest essence. How can one express what it represents? This defies description.

"To feel in oneself even for a short spell the effects of grace, encourages the seeker to pursue his quest. He has a presentiment of the power of this divine life and he secretly enjoys what it can provide in terms of uniqueness and greatness: to feel carried away by it, to want nothing else, to let it sweep away all resistances that make the path so difficult for human beings.

"Reaching this stage is a beginning; everything becomes, little by little, lighter for the seeker. He no longer feels helpless in the face of life. It takes time to reach the threshold of comprehension where he finally finds a good reason to pursue the way. May our way help him by supporting his faith and finding in it a Master and a spirit capable of motivating him, while knowing that he is guided in his fervour!

"For him and all our human brothers may the time of liberation come: the culmination of all the struggles whose harshness has borne fruit! The transformation of humanity entails this. It is the law of life, inflexible in its manifestation and sublime in its quintessence."
