Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Monday, April 4, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

This civilisation has come to an end, in terms of all its varied excesses. The majority of human beings do not know when to stop. They devote themselves to their instincts, without any qualms. A total reversal will have to occur, which only fear will be able to trigger. Defying the elements is not in the very nature of man; what could he do anyway, given his extreme smallness compared to this force which he considers as uncontrollable?

"The time of introspection has come. In the coming decades, all behaviour will need to be re-examined, in terms of respecting both nature and the divine laws, down to their least aspect.

"Man is not the Master here below – contrary to what he has believed for too long – destroying as he pleases what is of primary importance in the balance of life in this world. He is the main predator; full of his apparent superiority, he will have to learn humility, by the force of circumstances.

"Caught in this infernal spiral, he does not realise to what extent he is endangering life on this planet. The cries of alarm are not heard, as they are smothered by the constraints of profit prevailing in this era of alleged progress.

"Happy are those who have another dimension in their life, allowing them to work on themselves and to open up, beyond the limits of this world, to enlightening prospects concerning their elevation.

"Our brothers act in this direction; they are aware of the precariousness of this Earthly existence. They advance in the spiritual discovery, providing them with a higher inspiration of life and its continuity beyond this incarnation. Let them be blessed and strengthened in their work. May joy remain in their hearts."
