Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Tuesday, April 5, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

Man's best asset is divine love. Fervour gives it its true dimension and motivates him in his daily life, helping him to understand the meaning of the many vagaries punctuating life. Blessed are those who have this reference mark enabling them to find their bearings in the vast complex of the divine laws that surpass human understanding!

"Starting from basic principles, the way to the Invisible, to the divine source, is not within the range of a being. A wise man surrenders to divine power, in the face of which nothing resists. He is only an infinitely small piece of life, which, although concealing boundless ingenuity, remains very limited in his attributes in the face of the complexity of creation.

"This power must provide man with food for thought: where does he belong in this vast system? Does he understand the need to surpass himself, to try to rise towards more open-mindedness and union with what represents the very essence of his life? The world of matter is, shall we say, a pretext that leads him to take a physical form, to play a role that serves his evolution within the more general framework of the plurality of the worlds.

"Each life follows a planned path; there is no whim in this vast movement which humankind cannot control. It is wise to rely completely on the higher forces; only they have the last word on the chapter of an incarnation. It starts and ends as foreseen. This is how it is.

"May our aspirants understand it and comply with these principles."
