The time of hatred prevails on the Earth. To love one another, a nice formula which seems completely out of date—did it ever exist in reality? Well before these wars, [which have become] more and more destroying, was love ever manifesting itself more? Why all such hatred, why all this rancour between the nations, races, families, and individuals? What is this venom inoculated in men? They want to conquer other planets. What for? To sow the same evil? Which good aspects can they bring? Even what they believe is progress could prove fatal to other forms of life.

"We are dreaming of an Earth where we would come to be delighted about men's wisdom and to bless them. The two aspects of human nature: the good sides and the bad ones reinforce each other. Where will this tendency lead us? We should neither give up nor despair of men. Not only should one see only the good side in each person, but also one should see this mass of individuals who are doing their best to make a success of their life and to help the others to do likewise.

"Spirituality appears to us as the only effective means to change humanity. It will take time and much patience. So, help us, let's not despair, let's try, each one of us, with our respective tools, to build together this unique pyramid, luminous, which will rise towards the sky and will remain on the Earth, come hell or high water, the most beautiful building, symbolizing men's love."
