Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Sunday, April 17, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

My child, scenes of life are mere fleeting images; they quickly sink into oblivion. Some remain, leaving reference marks by which time can be measured. Each one of them is an experience added to the others and they constitute an incarnation's assessment.

"Good or bad, each act is necessary. If it is well understood, it is an asset allowing one to understand and advance through the maze of life. Nothing is a matter of chance, as understood by men. Chance does not exist, as we already said: it is an opportunity granted so that one's destiny can be accomplished. The story of a life is rich and unique with its multiple twists and turns.

"Beginning a spiritual path, is trying to open a window on the Infinite; patience and perseverance will be necessary, first and foremost. The heart, in a sincere and deeply felt commitment, will foster this work. Without it, nothing would be possible. It is the flame, the vital thread running through this business; it holds its secrets, being connected to the essence of the overall being.

"All this comes close to being a mystery to the seeker. What he confusedly feels in him is the manifestation of the Divine – unique and Great – in terms of the things this manifestation conveys vibrationally.

"Man, limited in his comprehension of higher energies, which he cannot reach with his current understanding, remains confined within the limits of knowledge in an era of not knowing.

"He aspires to a widening of consciousness freeing him from the darkness of obscurantism. Time has not come, it is coming; this is all we can say. May all our brothers understand this and prepare for it with fervour."
