Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Friday, May 6, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

This work, the product of your efforts, will bear fruit in the hearts. Many will be receptive to this speech that is stripped of superfluity and in accordance with their own journey.

"Reaching hearts does not require the twists and turns of the intellect, which revels in complexity. Our goal is different; it aims to elevate the soul within the seeker by finding a condition conducive for its expansion.

"To bring him back to simplicity and plainness, far from the many pitfalls of an artificial life where each one must prove oneself and come to terms with oneself one way or the other – this is the difficulty. This journey on Earth is short; man must take advantage of it in order to foster his progression on the way to wisdom.

"We choose this means to touch our brothers – most of whom are grappling with the complexity of life – to try to bring them back to a more accurate appreciation of things.

"The most affluent can lose everything instantly: health, or property that is tangible or emotional. Nothing is permanent, and that is something they lose sight of. Nothing is forever, especially not this life on Earth, although they seem to forget this in many circumstances.

"They fight to secure their social position; this is the normal situation, but in doing so, they often harm their neighbours. To develop oneself while respecting others is praiseworthy; there are so many possible ways that do not impede conventions relating to divine laws.

"We do not want to be moralisers. This world is a jungle without qualms, where the multitude externalises all the negativity hindering them. Man struggles to reach another way of being, more in line with a higher reality."
