Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, June 1, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

Just as a physically disabled person must rely on two canes to walk, here's what you who are not disabled need to do.

Your two points of support are: acceptance and love.

The ordinary person cannot conceive of it this way, and does not accept it.

You, our associates who are making efforts to advance, you must not only understand but also put this advice into practice.

Maybe some days you will rebel, that is human.

You have made a choice by entering Sahaj Marg. You seriously want to advance. You know that this way is simple and effective.

You understand, despite temporary shortcomings, that you are on the right path.

Acceptance saves you time; in a way, you shorten the process by adopting it.

What difference do you really think it makes to rebel? You come out of it stronger or more depressed.

Every victory over yourself is constructive, it makes you grow, it softens your heart and ours.

Fall one day, it's your right, but get up stronger the next.

Human beings have unsuspected resources; sometimes they surprise themselves, they realize they are not so bad ... after all.

A day of defeat, forget it, a victory must follow, then another, and it will be won.

Courage to you all, be blessed. We place our hopes in you.
