Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

The diversity of genres is intentional in these writings. It maintains the reader's attention. It is advisable to respect this diversity, as all has its raison d'être, here as elsewhere.

"Focusing on certain points while excluding others is not in the spirit of this collection [of messages]. Our brothers will do well to remember this in their approach to these messages, even if their tendencies push them in one direction rather than another.

"That the messages are accepted by a majority testifies to a considerable open-mindedness at the dawn of this new era. The future holds many other shocks about one's own nature, in terms of an awareness necessary to one's evolution. To work in this direction is salutary; humanity cannot progress if it is too set in its beliefs, which exclude the possibility of inter-world communication.

"When such communication emanates from reliable sources, it can bring to men – as it did in the past through voices that, over time, established themselves – a significant support enabling them to better find their bearings in their present situation. What is still disparaged today will be accepted in the future, by force of circumstances.

"As was said by a great son of God: 'Blessed are those who believe in the wonders of the Almighty', time has no constraint on them. Only men's minds must change and become capable of opening up to a reality that has been neglected for too long.

"Our aspirants are on an ascending way; may they look in front of them and not behind, in the interest of their personal fulfilment. Everything is being put in place to help them in these trying times, which are bewildering to many human beings here below.

"May all be blessed and supported in their process."
