Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Sunday, July 31, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

Your true homeland is inside; you know it, my child. It is your only refuge and the holy place where your soul can drink according to its profound inspiration. Here, there is no failure, no disappointment; all is immutable and true. Being refined, your perceptions make you reach these shores easily and with the same happiness every time. Is this not in itself a solace? Many human beings are deprived of this recourse, as they have not centred their life on the quest for absolute Splendour. Be strong; you will have to face up to the vagaries of your Earthly existence until the end, as is the case for all without exception.

"Think of the Mission. It is growing in the world and has an impact, perceived or not, on hearts that are sufficiently open and receptive to its benefits. Future times are being prepared; all is slow at this level of consciousness where the vibratory system, at its current frequency, limits progress. All is to be considered as a whole: forces are complementary and are harmonised in their highest expression. This planet, an element of the 'Great Whole', is only a weak breath in the omnipotence of the driving force of the cosmos.

"Scientists' deductions can seem childish from an external standpoint, and as far as reality is concerned. Men should be left to their convictions. However, sages do not have any convictions on subjects of this kind; the only things that matter to them are the infinitely subtle aspects they feel within and which connect them to the Source. What many pretend to know is so far from the truth! Happy are those who have understood where their efforts should be focused! May they be rewarded, beyond their hopes!"
