Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Saturday, August 6, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

My daughter, you record these messages in your heart and then render them on paper. Your efforts are not useless; a day will come when the multitude will feed on them, you can believe it. To feed on them is the right word for the occasion. By reading them, a soul finds in them a substance capable of filling it up. This rationale can escape the common run of people who ignore the divine laws, their power and their subtlety, which have no obvious equivalent here below.

"Happy are those who know or accept the effects of this higher power which they cannot detect. What is in matter also exists vibrationally up to higher levels of consciousness, where all, actually, has its source. Then, it manifests itself where appropriate and returns to its starting point. Nothing is created, nothing is lost. Everything exists spontaneously and acts in accordance with the rules enacted by a higher power, which man tries, in vain, to figure out. Man's intellectual and sensory possibilities are not sufficient for that. He lacks the main thing: the faculty to seize the Inexpressible, the ethereal substance not belonging to this world, although it is omnipresent therein.

"The human being must adjust perfectly to the possibilities offered to him, without trying to go beyond. His experience in this incarnation is decisive for his continuing process. Which way will he follow? For him, everything hinges on this choice. This incarnation is a stage in his long process. May he make a success of it as well as possible and thus contribute to raising the level of consciousness, which our aspirants have understood and put into practice as best they can with the grace of their Master."
