Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Thursday, August 11, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

Contrary to what he generally believes, man is not the only one to hold the keys of consciousness. In that, he is deeply mistaken. The impenetrable curtain of illusion is interposed between what he sees and reality. This world, in the current state of its planned evolution, stagnates in ignorance of facts and causes. Only significant spiritual progress will open up consciousness to the progress that is desired for a humanity adrift for lack of being built on its true nature.

"Human beings do not possess omnipotence, as many believe. By imposing their views at all costs, they thus generate a very heavy karma. Creation is of great complexity. It is just beginning to surprise those who believed they knew everything about it. In the future, species will appear in their true aspect, thus supplanting generally accepted ideas – the myths that have influenced centuries of ignorance on the largest variety of subjects. May the time soon come for revelation, for the light illuminating the souls and causing in men a complete reversal in their way of being. This world can change; it is imperative that it do so.

"Being limited to their current knowledge, how can they direct their life in the noblest direction since many of them have no notion of the Divine? The hidden meaning of life escapes the best-informed people. In the present state of affairs, things cannot be otherwise. The true revolution in this world will be that of knowledge: that which does not mislead and which bases its input on a reality hidden from men for too long."
