Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Friday, August 19, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

My child, to love one's spiritual Master, to venerate him, is a completely natural movement of the soul. He, himself, as we did before him, loves Him who was his Master on Earth. Thus is forged an imposing chain within our way, which is able to strengthen its vibratory structures, based on love and devotion towards the Divine. The love germinating in hearts heralds a beautiful harvest meeting our wishes.

"May the time soon come when humanity, finally enlightened, can advance in this light of the Spirit, without which no constructive liberation is possible. Striving towards this end is the vocation of our Mission. The ways leading to the goal are multiple; our way is applying itself to guiding souls towards their higher destiny, using the means it has. Our brothers and sisters, immersed in their humanity and coming up against their many failings, however, never cease to examine others and, especially, to criticise them.

"Thus are human beings, and yet, a true spiritual process implies another behaviour, consisting in keeping a check on oneself and looking at others differently. Seeing one's reflection in the mirror is not exciting; detecting what is good in the other, and only seeing that, testifies to the beginnings of wisdom. Thus the vision of the aspirant can be clarified on what they are really and they can act accordingly. Spending one's time dissecting others is not constructive; there are better things to do for oneself. We highly encourage them to act in this direction, so that nothing of this kind can slow down their progress. The light appears to pure hearts; do not forget it."

Babuji

