Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Sunday, September 4, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

When this world has overcome its lethargy, it will discover truths likely to open its eyes on the reality of its origins. All will then need to be re-examined concerning the beliefs of the past that have so far helped to maintain the idea of God in people's mind. Some aspects will be automatically clarified; man will then be able to better grasp the notion of the Divine. This golden age will happen on Earth; beforehand, it will have gone through great ordeals necessary for its development. Such are the laws.

"Whatever may happen, life remains; its appearance changes, though, while it continues – that's all. Leaving this world leads to following a long process elsewhere. It is high time for men to take account of this reality by not believing any more that everything stops with this life on Earth. A widening of consciousness will put them in phase with the necessities of life, in terms of its unfolding at the various stages of its multidimensional action in the universe.

"As an element of the Great Whole, guided in an ascending movement, each entity imperturbably carries on its evolutionary cycle without anything thwarting its path. Life is subjected to the higher powers. Human beings do not grasp this in its actual essence. As an emanation of the Divine, life complies with its laws, which are completely beyond human understanding. Man believes he knows, but he knows nothing. His life follows the course of a long history, of which man knows neither the beginning nor the end. That is the way it goes."
