If your life were different and your physical body less trying, would you be the medium you are? All is interwoven, as you know; thus is your path. Being chosen entails accepting all that refers to this mission, without raising one's eyebrows, which is your case most of the time. Your refuge is love; this faculty is a very important asset. Without it would you be committed every day in this exacting work which often requires such efforts? You are thinking of your Master; he also must make some efforts each day and try to control a physical body that resists his will. By and large, we all went through these painful stages, where, every day, one must comply with what the physical body allows one to do. All is numbered, as you know. Your fights are commendable and your work appreciated. All is well, my child. We can repeat it to you with pleasure.

"No, this message is not personal; it only shows that this work is not characterised by easiness. It results from a special relationship made of love and dedication to a noble cause, as well as surrender. Without it nothing important and durable can be built beyond the structures of this world; for example, these messages are reflected beyond the limits of this world. Let yourself be carried away by life and events and surprises associated with them, including some spaces of joy that are still accessible. Your heart does not give in vain; it also receives. Remain confident in life until the end; that is how the divine will can be accomplished, in the bliss and acceptance of its laws. Be thankful for the spiritually enlightening aspects it gives you and the associated graces. Be at peace and receptive to what you are offered every day through all the actions of your Earthly existence."
