Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Tuesday, November 1, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

The spiritual being knows how to keep its secrets, which the majority of men do not manage to do. Much mystery remains inside these secrets, protecting the true identity of the spiritual being. An incarnation is based on specific elements that must be addressed, hence the need for such secrets, which include, if necessary, some reminiscences of a sometimes very distant past. Celestial mechanics counter all failures; nothing is established whimsically, as appearances can sometimes delude one into believing.

"Our aspirants were guided towards our way; this call, which they deeply felt, characterises the needs of the present time. An era of peace and love is dawning on the horizon, and many tragedies will occur before it can thrive here below. But this world is planned like that, and whatever the difficulties to be overcome, sooner or later this era will be established in the hearts. So much suffering on this Earth is not useless; it is both inevitable and constructive. These arguments cannot be easily grasped; the divine laws can also keep their mystery. How could man, so limited to his view of life, understand them? Can human beings appreciate the raging of the elements, the ordeals of all kinds they must face during their Earthly existence? Few of them really manage this; it is the nature of things, in these times of profound regeneration of humanity where they have yet to go through the most difficult part.

"Humans must evolve towards the good and a radical awareness of their true nature. May they all be imbued with this idea and prepare for this. The darkness of ignorance cannot eternally darken mankind, intended for an altogether different destiny."
