Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Friday, December 2, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

Try, as much as possible, to remain serene in all circumstances. Has your heart not reached the shores of bliss and concluded, in these places, a holy pact under the best auspices? Set aside more moments for deep meditation into which your soul excels in leading you and which makes you stronger when you again find your footing in the reality of this world. Put things into perspective, my child. Who better than you can manage to do so? Your access to the world of the Spirit is significant in this aspect. Everything is relative here below, and it is not worth letting oneself be taken in by this illusory game.

"For a seeker, each day must impel him to pursue his path; each small victory over oneself has its own importance and well shows how effort can give benefits. It seems over time that everything must be started again, and yet the personality develops imperceptibly, yielding the best results. Each incarnate being is faced with the same battles; the most edifying ones are to be fought within oneself, in the secrecy of one's heart where the best is shaped. Human nature unceasingly manifests itself, giving free rein to its inclinations. So many struggles and obstacles are to be surmounted to come out of them with increased stature.

"All our brothers and sisters experience it; so will it be until the end. This opportunity is given to man, so that the best of them can prevail. From these battles, victory will emerge – the only one which is worth it in this long saga, signalling the destiny of every man. Our faithful and determined aspirants have understood where their priorities lie; they know that each day counts and they live it in this spirit. Blessed are they in their constant efforts."
