Whispers from The Brighter World

A Fifth Revelation

Monday, December 12, 2005 – 10:00 a.m.

Collective madness is likely to take hold of this world, if it continues in its excesses of all kinds. Cut yourself off from what upsets you, my child. You know the refuge now, and any time your soul aspires to it. Humanity must go through this stage before making a final choice concerning its destiny. Will men become sufficiently wise in time to understand where their safety lies, during the periods of great turmoil which are in the offing? The redeeming way is within everyone; many people know its outcome and will be able to use it when the time comes. May the majority not wait, and open now to the transcendence of the Spirit, in all its regenerating power.

"A vast spiritual movement is dawning on the horizon of this world. Owing to its power of action, it will manage to liberate the consciousness of people who are ready to take the great leap. We are striving to that end, as you and your mentor realise in your brief journeys out of this world in search of such impressions. Everything is first developed on levels freed from the traps of the material world, before materialising for a good cause in this world. To open up to the transcendence of the Spirit remains the challenge of this time. This planet is not the only one in the solar system to prepare for large-scale change. Nothing is done in isolation; the universe is a whole, organised and precise in its movements, according to a logic indiscernible by man.

"A new being must emerge from all this havoc. May our way contribute to it as widely as possible by its action that is diversified and promising for the future."
