Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World
A Fifth Revelation

Thursday, March 7, 2006 – 12:00 p.m.

To my son,

"Your brother cast off his chains, those which held him to the world of matter. He is being born into another existence, so very different – as you know – and where he will await you, together with all those who love you and who preceded him. Rejoice for him, my dear son. Such are the movements of life; they escape men's will. All is well like that. He is emerging into light, that which you perfectly prepared him for. We surround him in the best way possible. He is ready for great things in which he will be able to show his true richness, which he kept hidden from men's eyes.

"My dear son, don't be sad. Why should you? He will accompany you in a different way from now on, until the day you will meet again united on another plane, that of the world of the Spirit. He is starting a path where he will be able to give his best in the service of our way. All forces, wherever they may be, are linked together and reinforce each other with the same goal, while being carried by higher powers. Grace unites both your hearts, unfailingly. Be serene with regard to that. All is well, you can believe me. Go in peace and do as well as possible, with courage, as is your wont. All of us who love you are with you and we help you in our own way. May waves of love and grace overwhelm you and leave in your heart some relief, creating a new strength that will allow you to cope with what is heavy to you. Let the call of life blossom again in you; it will keep amazing you and calling to you. I am yours, my blessed son."

Babuji Maharaj

