My son is doing his best to enrich his teaching with what he receives through these messages. The time will come when their original content will be known. People's minds are opening up and will do more so in the future. Evidence will be given on this intercommunication and the indomitable ones will be well obliged to admit this principle.

"A widening of man's consciousness in the world will foster the recognition of such a practice.

"We are working to this end; nothing is useless in the work accomplished here, and one day, the efforts of our scribe, highly appreciated, will take on their full meaning. The messages have started to make their way into hearts and the future holds a prime position for them. Is this not encouraging...!

"Blessings to all."
