Monday, June 14, 1999 - 10:00 a.m.

You are all the children of God, without distinction. Do not slow down your progress by still having reactions of the type we have just mentioned. You should get rid of all these stupid stereotypes about differences. A day will come when all men will regard themselves as complementing each other, and as belonging to a big family. That will not happen soon; let's dream of future times when harmony will reign on the Earth. Therefore, be tolerant and never consider yourself more important than you are.

"My son will go back happy; the wings of the air—like a dove—carry him where he can act for the good of men and for peace. He is doing very good work, which cannot be evaluated in this material world. He has noticed that people's minds have changed. It should be stressed that for a few months, he has given much of himself to obtain this result; may it be sustained.

"We would like to see our work really bear fruit in most of the abhyasis. Things are moving; there is increased awareness and the eagerness to advance overtakes laxity—which still prevails only too much. We cannot resort to force to make you advance; we are very patient and understanding. Bear this in mind once and for all, whatever our remarks. We want the best for you all. That's all!

Babuji