Thursday, June 17, 1999 - 8:00 a.m.

Do not become obsessed by certain words in the messages. It is good to be strict and to write as is proper, but your dictionaries have deficiencies. Rectify and make adjustments if necessary as to what has been said. It's the meaning of the comments that matters as well as their vibration. You have not grasped this well as yet. You who are involved in this work, you want to do your level best, and we appreciate it.

"All these sentences which can seem insignificant are linked together and form a whole, capable of helping you in specific moments of your existence. These writings must nourish you and resonate in you like a friendly presence; they must enlighten you, or quite simply reassure you. In certain circumstances of your life, you will have in mind what was said and you will be guided in your way of acting by what will emerge from your conscience.

"Often, you want to do the right thing, but you go into directions that are not necessarily right for you or for the others. Who has the absolute truth? We give you this thread to help you through the twists and turns of life. In addition to your practice, we try to equip you as well as possible to face up to things using various means, including this form of teaching. Your libraries are full of books; some read them, and others don't. This daily message will become perhaps a fellow traveller, easy to read; such is our wish. Each day, a different topic, many have been addressed. Some of you will make good use of them, such is our conviction."

Babuji