Whispers from The Brighter World
A Sixth Revelation

It would be nice indeed to correct our comments, which were somewhat distorted, by reinstating the original text in French. This dear Kamlesh delivered a very nice speech; we enjoyed it.

Dear scribe, there are noble souls around you. They are attracted by the subtle essence with which we flood your heart. These people are totally devoted to the Mission, and we appreciate them in their respective roles through which everyone gives their best. Time will remember the names of those fervent followers who, with integrity, have supported my son in carrying his heavy load. You see, my daughter, this is how things go down in history: praiseworthy deeds are remembered, as time does not allow the fading of that which honours it and makes a Mission like ours grow in stature. Other spiritual paths in this world have faithfully preserved certain moments in their history, along with the names that do honour to the greatness of their Master; such is the will of God. Blessed are the pure in heart. The divine nourishes and inspires them.
