Saturday, June 26, 1999 - 10:00 a.m.

There are on the Earth, points of light which are not visible to 'the naked eye', as you say. They are important. They play their role and are necessary for a certain balance; even if you don't see them, they do exist. These are luminous lines that mark out our path among men. What can they be compared with? There are, on your road networks, more or less luminous traffic signs, according to the importance of the stakes involved. Without them, your motorways would be in such chaos! There is no real relation to this; we only mean to facilitate your visualization, according to your own view of the spiritual world. Don't start again racking your brains. You are too tired. Let your circle work a bit. That's all."

Babuji