Whispers from The Brighter World
A Sixth Revelation

Monday, July 11, 2011 – 10:00 a.m.

Here, in this rather special diary in which love is celebrated, only the beauty of creation and the best of humanity should be displayed. Each kingdom – all that lives on Earth – has its laws, its joys and sufferings. Humans do not spare nature, nor do animals; they kill each other, as it is in the order of things. We have already said this – life feeds on life. Human beings cannot escape those rules. Whether they are vegetarian or not, they must eat and participate in this feast; such are the rules in this world. Respecting nature is a duty, and what it offers should not be wasted; on this there is much to say.

Blessed are those who are aware of the precariousness of creation. Everything around them can be destroyed in an instant. Although people want to forget it today, history is fraught with precedents – disasters of an indescribable scale. Nothing is granted forever; no one should forget this. Hard times will come on this Earth, and human beings will regret not having spared the riches made profusely available to them.

Celebrating the beauty of nature is an act of faith and respect for the Creator. So much that is beautiful amazes humans; may they all be aware of the richness offered by life.
