My dear sister, I have been waiting so long for this moment. Thank you for granting it to me despite your fatigue. The opportunity of expressing my love to this beloved son is a blessed gift. It is good that he returns to Manapakkam where there are more possibilities for him. Also, this place is charged with a favourable energy, which can only help him on this difficult path concerning his health.

As you can see, my very dear son, she who was your mother is always by your side, sometimes happy and sometimes very concerned for you whose mission in this world is so heavy to bear. You have always carried it out with mastery and exemplary courage. Devoting one's life to a noble cause is an extraordinary grace.

I never cease to thank and honour the Masters as well as the divine and sovereign Power for having made you one of the Masters of this magnificent spiritual way, well-suited to the new era. Spare yourself, my beloved son. I am watching over you in the background and at your side – most discreetly. Isn't a mother always with her beloved child? Forgive me for expressing myself like this to you, the Chosen Master. You are powerful in your domain, but in this context love is stronger than anything. Spare yourself, take good care and be happy in spite of everything. Your aura continues to grow and arouse the admiration and love of all, both here below and in the heavenly kingdom. Receive in your heart the very best from your mother.
