My Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, July 28, 2012 — 10:00 a.m.

As far as our Mission is concerned, you should look far ahead, think big and beautiful: time will grant it a privileged place in this world. My son has established a solid structure. At the human level, the management will require strengthening in terms of unreserved respect for the Master. Personal initiatives are not welcome concerning decisions about important issues. Unity and respect for the Master must be sustained over time. Differences of opinion that are supported by undesirable egos are not welcome here. History has demonstrated the tragic side of egos, which our organisation does not really need. Is it not said that unity is strength? In certain circumstances, unity reveals fine human qualities which we would like to become the hallmark of our Mission now and in the future. Far-reaching spiritual movements were affected by inappropriate personal initiatives, as was our Mission in the past.

"May all sincere and fervent people who hold positions of responsibility in our Mission carry on their path with fervour and in compliance with the divine laws which are inescapable in this world, as elsewhere. Going in the opposite direction is a serious mistake. We expect the best from everyone in these difficult times for our beloved son. It is up to each one to commit themselves towards good, under our blessings."

Babuji Maharaj