Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, July 29, 2012 — 10:00 a.m.

Life on Earth is very fragile; it hangs by a thread, as you would say. Life is what it should be and, above all, it is never easy for any of you here below. A spiritual way is meant to elevate human beings, to permit them to overcome their own tendencies and control character traits that are harmful to their evolution. Unfortunately, this topic remains a sensitive one. We have no magic wand, and we can see some of our abhyasis acting with impudence; all this is sad, but we are here at the human level, and this is inescapable.

When the time comes for a perfect world on Earth, we will all be able to rejoice here and offer humans a more favourable space where they can blossom at all levels.

That time has not yet come; we must accept the existing circumstances and move forward against all odds to change the current situation. Many of our brothers and sisters are making progress and becoming aware of their weaknesses. A perfect world is not for tomorrow; we must accept it as it is and attend to what is, in this era so tormented at so many levels and in which moral values keep deteriorating. Pending a major upheaval whereby everything will be able to make a fresh start on new foundations, we are trying to employ delay tactics and help as far as possible. All our brothers and sisters are on their way, having to manage their daily lives under the current circumstances. Blessings to all.
