Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, August 17, 2012 — 10:00 a.m.

Life is a continual struggle; an incarnation is a trying process, an opportunity granted to humans to surpass themselves and to conquer inside themselves a sacred space where their spiritual potential can be revealed. Our way is helping abhyasis with this end in view according to their commitment, receptiveness and loyalty towards the Master and towards a method whose effects — whether humanly visible or not — bear sizeable fruits. Becoming incarnate is a formidable experience in terms of outcomes, and understanding the need to act for the good, for one's own good, is a definite advantage.

"How many lives does it take to rise, to adjust to that which must be, in the strict sense of this term? May all our aspirants understand the need to act for their own evolution. Time is running short for everyone; 'the way of the heart' is offered to them with a method and a means to thus advance at their own pace. It is up to them to understand and experience a sensitive approach to the truth from a human being's perspective. Each person has their own potential, their own faith, and the perseverance that befits such a process. It is said that one day 'the divine goal will be achieved' — that is the context in which this way is offered, together with the living Master's very specific action associated with the aspirant's practice. All are advancing at their respective pace and are assisted as is appropriate, although the relevant results cannot be objectively measured. Hearts are changing significantly in varying degrees depending on each person's commitment and faith.

"Constant blessings to all!"
