Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, September 20, 2012 — 10:00 a.m.

We are attentive to each of the elements constituting this Sahaj Marg Mission. Our aspirants are followed and supported in their efforts, even though it may not seem so. Ordeals are unavoidable; on this point, and for most of our aspirants' destiny, we cannot change anything. We can only ensure that a positive outcome emerges from their difficult times. We too have experienced them; no being on Earth escapes this heavy toll. Each step is decisive: following a spiritual path is a very positive move. As they refine themselves, humans manage to circumvent certain obstacles that would further burden their destiny. To engage in self-knowledge — of one's weaknesses but also one's strong points — permits a person to rely on the best of themselves.

Who does not struggle and repeatedly experience painful events throughout a lifetime? The recourse lies there deep down within the being where the best is built, that which is most gratifying in such a refined spiritual process. It is not easy to measure its effects; nothing is obvious and tangible in human terms. Only the final assessment will bring to light this work, revealing the possibilities offered by such an approach.

We always wish more and better for the whole of this Mission, whose impacts are magnified with time. When the great moment of revelation has come, many souls will rejoice to have followed a way like this. It saves valuable time and, under our blessings, provides fervent souls thirsting for the Divine with the substantial nourishment they need.
