Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, September 23, 2012 — 10:00 a.m.

Everything moves, everything changes around you, but this invisible flame that lives in your heart is immutable and constant in terms of its effects. This area is reserved and somewhat protected from the vagaries of life in the material world. Spiritual life is in itself a sacred island where the best can be accomplished for our truly committed aspirants. We see beings changing imperceptibly over time. Our abhyasis may ask themselves what progress this method provides. It is not easy for them to measure its results and yet these are revealed to them in certain circumstances and, most importantly, they remain productive on their journey. All Earthly goods are fluctuating, and everything can be lost instantly. Whether these are material possessions or loved ones, nothing can ever be taken for granted — this is worth considering. The only immutable good is that which is generated by a soul's journey. It is carried over beyond an incarnation and it is an inexpressible blessing for the subtle being that continues its journey elsewhere. A lifetime on Earth is short and its effects are limited; not frittering it away in vain efforts testifies to the wisdom and inner provisions of a human being. There is so much to do here below; focusing on what is essential limits the loss of time. We wish the best for all. The way is open for our aspirants. It is up to them to conquer the rare gem, that of bliss. We help them with that in more ways than one; thus are accomplished the wonders of the Spirit in these times when there is every hope for success in this aspect."
