Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, October 15, 2012 — 10:00 a.m.

Your heart is the receptacle of love; it has been feeding on our comments for so many years. Its mission here below is to transcribe them. The fruits of this work will withstand time; their action will be very long lasting. Blessed are those who already understand their importance. These comments will leave their mark on this period of history, and their sustainability will be confirmed in the future. Has it not always been so for sacred scriptures? They take on their full importance over time. They leave their mark on people's minds and embellish their hearts. Isn't the noblest goal of existence to progress in this approach towards the Divine? Bliss is at the end of the road; one has to earn it, to win it through the heart. It is strengthened by surges of love that are out of the ordinary. Everything is justified here in a process that involves beings who are very willing to conquer the kingdom of the spirit. This kingdom is not easy to reach, but doesn't the goal justify the means to access it? Allowing oneself to be won over by grace, feeding on it, delighting in it is the noblest of all human adventures; it leads to unalterable peace.

"We are insisting for the good of those seekers who trust us in all aspects. It is good to choose the right thing in order to achieve the best results. Carrying our faithful aspirants to the highest, up to that unique feast where the soul can marvel and enjoy these achievements, is gratifying at the highest point. Blessed are the pure in heart; they shall see the light. Nothing is fairer and more rewarding in this realm where we are carrying them to what is best."
