Saturday, July 10, 1999 - 10:00 a.m.

Surrender to the Divine, my child, as your troubles still aren't over.

"There are moments of peace and serenity on the Earth, but it is not in any way an idyllic place where you can live quietly. Life is like a changeable sky in terms of its colours, its turbulences; these moments need to be lived with patience and resignation. The sun will reappear inevitably.

"To take your mind off the problems affecting you, turn it to all these countries where dreadful things are happening which are not necessarily reported. Some countries in the world go through a living hell. Your friends feel themselves a little forgotten for some time. They are making good progress, that is not new, but you can reassure them, they are advancing gaily.

"My dear daughter, this day at the ashram—we know—makes you happy, even if it has not recorded a high number of abhyasis. Be connected with the ongoing work; it is a good initiative to be renewed. It has all our attention. Gatherings increase energies tenfold, which radiate and benefit all. Spend this day as well as possible. May the special union which exists between you who have access to the messages be sustained and make you enrich one another."

Babuji