Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, November 25, 2012 – 10:00 a.m.

You see what love can do? It allows you to rise above what would be an obstruction in other circumstances. A surrendered heart can go beyond its limits, its human strengths. Love is promising and redeeming; this energy could change the world in an instant if that surrender were widespread and total. Nothing takes place at that rate here below; planet Earth is programmed this way in the universal order. Each planet has its own laws and forms of life, even if they are not visible to human eyes. Human beings would do well to respect those forms of life for what they are, even if they differ greatly from their own. Knowledge is limited in so many domains, yet some 'scientists' believe they are the masters of the world. The human being is small before the higher powers who determine the evolution of the various life forms that inhabit this Earth as well as other worlds. Each world has its prerogatives and its predetermined rules regarding evolution – an evolution which is all-encompassing and by no means stagnant.

When human beings are engaged in an active spiritual path, they continue beyond this incarnation on a way that they began here below. Such an approach is not only important at the present time, but it also determines the way the journey will continue in the world of the Spirit. A fervent heart pursues its trajectory; it is directed and helped so as not to waste time. Time is valuable here, as elsewhere, where everything is counted in all possible aspects. Thus does a sincere being proceed towards the realm of bliss.
