Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, December 2, 2012 — 10:00 a.m.

Irrespective of time and space, the communion of hearts takes place when necessary. A profound call is always heard. Time is an Earthly parameter. Here it is not the same, our points of reference are different and we comply with yours for good reason. The receiving of these messages over so many years has become an imperative rendezvous that we would surely miss if it were to end. When that day comes, other opportunities will open up for our Mission. These writings will require studying. They are like a mine yet to be exploited; their exegesis is planned for. Then, important elements will emerge, as many facts that support each other will have been put together. This prospect has been considered; in his great wisdom, our son has already planned for this possibility.

"Time leads to a raising of awareness; that which did not seem important yesterday will become so tomorrow. All sacred scriptures of the past required such work over many years. Today's means are more far-reaching, and they will facilitate that study. It will require reflection and introspection, as appearances may conceal a teaching likely to enrich our Mission. Tomorrow's humans, and hence our abhyasis, will be more receptive. They will develop greater sensitivity in the face of the reality of the world of the Spirit. There is no limit to what we can hope for. Let us all keep working accordingly for the progress and understanding of beings who face their own potential in this area.

"May all be enlightened and strengthened!"
