Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, July 14, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

Nothing we can say will change the course of events. Human beings have gone too far in their excessiveness. They will have to pay for their excesses, their self-importance, their lack of respect for the Earth and for their fellow creatures.

It is sad, what a disgrace – they have gone mad by playing the sorcerer's apprentice. They believe they are the masters of the world; all these horrors they have created will fall on their heads. Innocent people will pay for their negligence.

Human beings believe they have mastered the atom; it is the atom that will do so by destroying what humans have built. The situation has reached its paroxysm.

Cries of alarm have been raised for years and have not been heard. It is difficult to extinguish a huge fire without suitable means.

Ultimately, God will decide what to do or not do. The situation is more than alarming.

If not to pray, what can you do at your level? See the human stupidity guided by a monstrous ego.

This escalation in foolishness will stop by force of circumstance.

Your decadent festivals that celebrate organized murders are quite useless.

Become aware of the disastrous situation in the offing; in the more-or-less long term, the organizers of all these monstrosities will pay for having dared, deliberately, to endanger the future of the planet.
