Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, January 11, 2013 — 10:00 a.m.

Life is an eternal beginning. Many cycles have characterised this Earth; major changes will occur again, and they will be decisive for the human race in terms of its evolution and sustainability over time and space. One should often get to the bottom of things so that a beneficial transformation can emanate from all this. This planet has never been populated so much; this so-called progress does not specifically serve the spiritual evolution of human beings. A life focused too much on materiality cannot generate the best in this area. Too many temptations and distractions of all kinds monopolise the human being and, to some extent, divert him from the goal to be reached.

"It is not easy in such a context to focus on what is essential; only a profound motivation can lead the seeker to a degree of detachment that is conducive to a true spiritual journey. It's up to each one to keep a check on oneself, to take stock of one's true motivations and one's commitment towards the spiritual Master, as well as the whole Mission — in that it includes the human plane, with its unavoidable uncertainties and inevitable difficulties.

"This underlying motivation ought to help the aspirant overcome anything that is basically irrelevant. What matters is only the goal, the unique goal — that which helps humans to divest themselves of useless things and move towards their primary objective of advancing further and further in this sublime quest of the Divine, the essence of which is unique. A deep commitment attracts our attention. May all advance eagerly under our constant blessings."
