Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, January 14, 2013 – 10:00 a.m.

This is how today's humanity is, and you cannot change it. Human beings are suffering from many turbulences that affect their balance; this situation is not going to get better. They are not the only ones concerned; everything that lives on this Earth also suffers from distressing disturbances that continue to worsen. Nothing at the human level can stem this devastating tide.

We do not mention these scourges without good reason; it is time for this world to react before it is too late. We will not dwell further on this. It is difficult for us to address such matters, but how can we remain insensitive to this distressing situation! The refuge of faith, of a love capable of transcending the prevailing negativity, remains a good motivator. It allows one to interiorise oneself even more when nothing more can be done to change things. A true spiritual approach allows for a different view of all kinds of events that might well destabilise the ordinary person.

An approach like ours is a great help for beings truly committed to this redeeming process. This world is as it is. We cannot change it; our action lies elsewhere. Even if we are saddened by the current situation, we can do nothing about it. It is different in the field of spirituality which makes it possible for humans to go beyond matter and move towards what is necessary for their elevation. Thus, motivating prospects open up before the abhyasi, allowing each one to progress against all odds. We support them in this. Was it not said by one of your philosophers that spirituality would save the world!
