Wednesday, July 14, 1999 - 8:00 a.m.

All that we will be able to say will not change the course of events. Men have gone too far in their excesses. They will have to pay for their excesses, their self-importance, and their lack of respect for the Earth and for their fellow men. It is sad, it's a disgrace; they have turned mad by playing God. They believe they are the masters of the world. All these horrors that they have created, they will pay for them. Innocent people will pay for their negligence. Man believes he controls the atom; it is the atom that will do it by destroying what man has built; the situation has reached its paroxysm. Cries of alarm have been uttered for years and are not heard. It is difficult to extinguish a huge fire without suitable means.

"As a last resort, God will decide what He must do or not do. The situation is more than alarming. Apart from praying, what can you do on your level? Notice the human foolishness guided by a monstrous ego. This escalation in insanity will stop by the force of things. Your decadent festivals aimed to celebrate organized murders are quite useless. You should become sensitive to the terrible situation in the offing; in the more or less long term, the organizers of all these preposterous acts will pay for having dared, deliberately, to endanger the future of the planet."

Babuji