Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, February 28, 2013 – 10:00 a.m.

The soul is immortal. It is gliding towards the Infinite and reaches spheres where its journey allows it to evolve, hence the goal of a spiritual way – that which contributes to this elevation of each soul. Nothing is more beautiful than this elevation, when the soul's eagerness to advance heightens its faith in a path that is decisive for it.

The Master, the guide in this trajectory, is most important; his action enables what would not otherwise be possible. A beautiful soul, surrendered and sincere, needs this light to illuminate its way on this Earth and, beyond that, where it is necessary for the transmigration of the soul on its heavenly course. An incarnation here below is a necessary stopover; its duration is short compared to eternity.

There is no time to lose; may all our abhyasis, convinced of this necessity, move forward with ardour and determination. A frivolous life is a waste of time. It is a serious failure to meet the requirements of the being's spiritual entity, thirsty for the Divine.

Many people neglect this aspect of their personality, but is their awakening sufficient for them to become aware of it? Alas, this neglect is commonplace. We have no magic wand; the time of spiritual apotheosis has not reached its peak – we are far from it. Much work remains to be done, and we must forge ahead to help this humanity that is growing in number, but not in wisdom.

Enlightened souls understand our words. Our brothers and sisters should involve themselves more in their practice, thus fostering an overall progress made up of higher and subtler vibrations. These vibrations will be decisive in the future. These remarks may seem unfounded, but such is not the case. Doesn't everything have its raison d'être? Let us all work – and at all levels – to achieve the goal. May all be enlightened on this point and strengthened in their determination to make real progress.

Blessings to everyone.
