Friday, July 16, 1999 - 10:00 a.m.

What is important, and I will never repeat this point enough: respect the other, your brother, your sister. The differences are necessary. They sometimes cause frictions, which, once understood well, make you progress. You are in this great spiritual wave, which must unite you above all. Never lose sight of that. Yes, unity must be strengthened, it must build the future of the Mission; strong divergences and schisms would weaken it. It must be increasingly stronger to face the events that will inevitably occur in the world as well as within our own organization. You must remain united in all circumstances. Imagine the day when my son also will leave this world, it will be high time to stick together, more particularly.

"We repeat enough that there should be no attachment to the physical person of the Master, but it is only human. Many will not accept, which will stir destabilization for some time. The strongest will have to reason with the others about this event and all additional things that will occur. Remain confident and united; we will never repeat it enough. You say you love us, so, prove it."

Babuji